(Photo from "An Illustrated History of Russia," by Joel Carmichael: Reynal and Company, N.Y.)

STRIKE AT THE PUTILOV MILLS, 1905

Workers at the Putilov Mills in St. Petersburg—Russia's largest steel mills —strike in protest against Bloody Sunday.

MEETING IN THE TAURIDE PALACE, 1917

Katherine Hall of the Tauride Palace—a ballroom built to accommodate 20,000 dancers beneath its glittering chandeliers—takes on a different aspect as thousands of peasants, sailors, and soldiers jam its parquet floor in the dense confusion following the fall of Tsarism.

(Photo from "An Illustrated History of Russia," by Joel Carmichael: Reynal and Company, N.Y.)

